Dear Dan:

I have made a few changes in the paper that you discussed at the meetings of the American Economic Association.

On pages 13 and 14 I elaborated my argument somewhat to emphasize its application to black power separatism. I think your comments apply fully as well to what I have said now as to what was in the original paper. I have, in any event, pointed out in a footnote that I have made this change in response to your criticism. Still, it is possible you would feel that this would be an unfair change, so I would, of course, be happy to go back to the original paper should you prefer that.

Just let me know if you would have any difficulties with the changes I have made.

Thanks again for your most helpful and generous comments.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Dan:

I have made a few changes in the paper that you discussed at the meeting of the American Economic Association. On page 13 and 14, I changed the statement somewhat to emphasize the collection to black book of statistics. I think your comments apply fully as well to what I have said now as to what was in the original paper. I have, in any event, pointed out in a footnote that I have made this change in response to your criticism. Well, it is possible you would feel this would be an unfair change, so I would, of course, be happy to go back to the original paper should you prefer that.

Just let me know if you would have any difficulties with the changes I have made.

Thanks again for your most helpful and generous comments.
